

About

Funky fresh indie-pop from North London

Biography

Palomino Club was formed by Hannah Stacey in 2012 when a mysterious horse-like figure visited her in a dream and told her to set up an indie-pop band.

Realising that she didn't have enough arms, legs or musical talent to sing and play keyboard, guitar, bass and drums at the same time, she drafted in the help of Damion Sheppard, Dan Graham and Paddy Johnston through a mixture of emotional blackmail and bribery. This worked, and Palomino Club released its first demo in May 2013. Since then Damion and Dan have moved on to other pastures and have been replaced by Catherine Pate and Stuart Gililand, formerly of Neon Choir.

Founded January 2012

Genre Pop/electro/indie

Members Hannah Stacey - Vocals and keyboards
Stuart Gililand - Bass
Paddy Johnston - Guitar and backing vocals
Catherine Pate - Drums

Hometown London

Record Label Unsigned

Current Location London

Press Contact hanstacey1@gmail.com